Benefit through Sponsorship of the Symposium

Following the hugely successful inaugural Symposium in 2018, the Postgraduate Research Symposium on Ferrous Metallurgy is established as the showcase annual event for presentation, demonstration and acknowledgement of the latest academic thinking on ferrous metallurgy.

- > Be acknowledged as a leader and supporter of academic research into ferrous metallurgy
- > Enhance your standing in the steel industry, the materials sector, universities, centres for doctoral training and government agencies; whilst also developing client relationships
- > Stand out as a leading supporter of academic research and highlight your organisation to a captive audience

The 2019 Symposium will allow doctoral researchers and university departments from across the UK to showcase their research. The Symposium will inspire academics and research students to engage in the research challenges of the steel industry and provide a forum for industry and academics to network and discuss future research opportunities.

Testimonials from the 2018 Symposium

JOHN DALE, TECHNICAL DIRECTOR BRITISH STEEL

"It was fantastic to see how ferrous metallurgy is being taught and developed by these young minds. The symposium demonstrated that steel is the most recycled material in the world, which is essential for a successful UK economy to be sustainable. Hopefully, these symposium's will continue to bring academics and industrial partners together to develop the solutions that continue to see steel being used in its adaptive form for many more centuries to come.

PROFESSOR BILL BONFIELD CBE FRS
CHAIRMAN, ARMOURERS & BRASIER'S MATERIALS SCIENCE COMMITTEE

"The first Postgraduate Research Symposium on Ferrous Metallurgy was an inspirational opportunity for young researchers to showcase their work to their peers, and to senior academics and industrialists. I was delighted to chair the expert judging panel from the Armourers & Brasiers' Company and it was a challenge to identify winners from so many talented contributors. The Symposium is an invaluable addition to the calendar for this strategically important sector of UK manufacturing, providing support for the academic and industrial collaboration that is essential to its success."

CHRIS WESTON-SIMONS, UPPER WARDEN
ARMOURERS & BRASIER'S COMPANY

"It was a privilege to attend the Materials Processing Institute Postgraduate Research Symposium on 27th February, listen to the various papers and present prizes to the winners. The Worshipful Company of Armourers & Brasiers is delighted to work closely with the Materials Processing Institute in the sponsorship and promotion of next generation research."
